

Proposal for game number 1

Name:

The End of the Road

Description:

The End Of the Road is a car racing simulation game in which players choose from a range of 20 drivers and corresponding automobiles all based on famous celebrity car deaths. Once the famous crash victim and corresponding automobile have been chosen players proceed to enter world rally tour consisting of all the final routes of the famous deceased, ranging from James Dean's highway 41 crash in California to Princess Diana's crash in the Place de l'Alma tunnel in Paris. Each character has strengths and weaknesses (their special features) based on real personality traits and facts about their lives that will affect their game control. The aim of the game is to win the races while at the same time making your opponents crash using the special features given to each character.

Below is a selection of characters and descriptions of their special features.

Character 1: Jack the Dripper.

Based on: Jackson Pollock

Special Features:

1. Jackson Pollock's car has an 'abstract expressionist' oil spill option. Players can leave a trail of oil behind them rendering all opponents who drive over it into a frenzied 360-degree skid.
2. Pollock can throw bottles of beer out of the convertible at opponent drivers rendering them temporarily dazed.
3. Pollock's driving disadvantages include being constantly drunk, resulting in reduced or sluggish control of his vehicle. His car also has a strange attraction to Oak trees, resulting in a magnetic pull towards any which may line the racing circuit.

Character 2: Diana

Based on: Princess Diana

Special Features:

- Scooter riding Paparazzi photographers constantly follow Princess Diana's Mercedes Sports SL. As with all personal relationships with the tabloid media this has its advantages and disadvantages.
1. You can use the Paparazzi to disable your opponents by the special feature 'flash exposure'; Paparazzi photographers will chase your opponent constantly taking photographers therefore temporarily blinding opponents with over exposure.
  2. Paparazzi photographers can also slow down opponents with French style 'drive slow' campaigns.
  3. The disadvantages of the Paparazzi entourage are that they can suddenly turn on you and use 'flash exposure' and 'go slow' tactics to distract you the driver of the Mercedes.
  4. The Mercedes sports car does not cope well in tunnels. The driver of the car will feel like he/she is driving an extremely fidgety car.
