

Proposal for game number 2

Name:

Reality Football - The Road to the 2026 World Cup

Description:

The road to 2026 is a football game that reflects the actual reality of being a modern footballer. The ultimate aim of the game is to win the world cup 2026 as captain of the England football team. You will start the game at the age of 10, playing for your local under-11 Sunday league team. You will play on undulating public pitches, with sheepskin coat wearing managers who make you fetch the ball when you kick it over the bar. Fine tune your skills and preferred position, play well until your local talent scout spots you, then grow with your player through the YTS scheme to first team football for the local league team. You may get yourself an agent and negotiate your first contract. Play well and with your agent negotiate a transfer to a club in a higher league. Finally after a few game years, you may play in the premiership. Conduct post match interviews for TV. Make your way up the league and rankings and eventually make it to the full England team where you will help them qualify for the world cup finals. Here you will have to act as a model professional, staying away from any potential scandals (of which the game will have scores of) that might put you on the front page of the tabloids. Any personal problems you have off the pitch; affairs with prostitutes, drug or alcohol addiction, injuries, car accidents etc, will affect you players' skill, endurance and drive to win.
